Summary: The Foundation's commitment is to improve people's health and well-being, especially those who confront barriers due to low- to moderate-socioeconomic status, race, ethnicity, and gender. The Foundation defines health broadly and include within our expanded view the link between physical health and the economic, social, environmental and psychological factors that affect individuals, families, and communities. To improve Americans' health by ensuring that all people in the United States have access to high quality and affordable health care and live in a healthy environment. The Foundation has three areas of objectives: health access, environmental health and capacity building. For health access, to ensure access to high quality and affordable health care for all by supporting systemic change, fostering innovation and facilitating the development and implementation of equitable and sustainable public policies. For environmental health, to create a healthier, more equitable and sustainable quality of life by supporting systemic change, fostering innovation and facilitating the development and implementation of public policies resulting in businesses, government and other institutions taking responsibility for the real health and social impacts of their activities. For capacity building, to increase the capacity of health care advocates, health care consumers, and other stakeholders to influence public debates, shape public policy, and build effective alliances.
